A Vision for Village Revitalization

By Mark Whitehead

A community-serving retail district located south on Camino del Mar near 9th street, more continuity of lively store-fronts, streamlined development processes, and improving "perceptions" about parking were among the recommendations of Ms. Kennedy Smith whose long-awaited revitalization plan for Del Mar's business core was presented to the city council on March 17. The plan was commissioned by the Del Mar Village Association (DMVA) which shared its cost with the city. The plan is "not just another study," according to DMVA president Walt Beerle. Stating the city has lots of completed studies, Beerle explained that the prior studies were used by Ms. Smith together with new survey data to analyze the pros and cons of the business district, and to make suggestions for improvements that would be a good fit.

Desirable features of the village core, according to Ms. Smith, include its unique look, protected views, an engaged citizenry and community affluence. She also praised the marketing efforts of the DMVA in recent years. Negative features include unusually high "regulatory burdens" that discourage development, the City's inability to fund public improvements, and an underperforming retail sector. Ms. Smith explained that the retail businesses in the village core produce about $260,000 in annual sales tax revenues for the City; about half of what could be expected. "In fact", said Ms. Smith, "city revenue from parking fines is greater than revenue from retail!"

The report analyzed voids in retail businesses that could be successful, given Del Mar's demographics. It recommended more resident-serving shops, including convenience products, and visitor destination shops offering unique gifts.

Investing in Our Future

Our generation's open space challenge is in a crunch time, but acquisition of the five-acre Shores school site for a community park is more than half way to its $8.5 million goal. Donors to date total 186 and ten pledges, many of these from the Winston School community. Now the entire community needs to join in.

Consider some math to decide what level of giving is appropriate. If one's net worth, all your assets minus your debts, is $1 million, a one-half percent contribution is $5,000; a net worth of $5 million is a $25,000 donation.

The open-space acquisitions of the past, Crest and Anderson Canyons, Seagrove and Powerhouse Parks, define our community and contribute to the values of our houses. The Shores site will surely have the same payoff.

There are over 2,000 households in Del Mar. If only 100 gave $20,000 each, we will be halfway home; another 200 at $10,000 each, we will hit the goal.

Consider how much we spend for cars, maybe as little as $20-25 thousand for a 3-5 year investment. The Shores park is a lifetime, generation-jumping investment. Consider the value of this gift to three and more generations of friends and relatives – it's way more than an automobile.

Dig deep. We can do it, Del Mar.

A "Shore" Thing – With Your Help

By Barbara Mandel-Pache

The Campaign for Del Mar Shores is working diligently to raise the $8.5 million needed to purchase the Shores property, despite discord at the Del Mar Union School District. The resignations of both DMUSD superintendent Tom Bishop and trustee Linda Crawford have left many community members wondering how the shake-ups will affect the Campaign. And many in the community are anxious to hear about the progress of negotiations between the City Council and the District trustees regarding the requested extension of escrow for the Shores property.

Our City Council members have assured the Campaign they are confident that we will be able to complete the campaign, and that acquiring the property is a high priority of the Council. It is a community vision that we retain the Shores property for recreational and educational space, and when this community decides something is important, residents rally to reach the goal.

Campaign for Del Mar Shores co-chair Mike Peterson paints in the donation thermometer on Camino del Mar. $4.8 million raised to date

So where are we in the progress of raising the $8.5 million needed? $4.8M is committed to date. So almost $4 million is still needed. Because we have been waiting for the official news of an extension of escrow, it has been a bit more challenging to push ahead with the community-wide efforts of the campaign, but we are persevering.

We are getting the word out to folks in the community through The Sandpiper and other news media. We are talking to our friends and neighbors, and encourage all supporters to pass on the word. This campaign will take our entire village to succeed. If you can get involved in any level, we invite you to join us. Please call Joe Sullivan at 792-7733, Laura Stanley DeMarco at 692-5194, or Barbara Mandel Pache at 755-6434. Would you like to join the campaign committee? Host a coffee at your home for a small group of neighbors? Help with an event? And importantly, can you make a financial contribution to acquire the property?

City Opts for Virtual Revitalization

By Art Olson

In a surprise move at the April 1st City Council meeting, council members decided to opt for a revitalization plan suggested by a previously undisclosed “shadow” consultant. That consultant, Les S. Moore of Community Land Use by Les (CLU-LES) had been hired, during a closed session by the Council, to provide a reality check on the report proffered by Kennedy Smith of C.L.U.E. The Moore report acknowledges similar trends and problems facing Commercial Del Mar but proposes a totally different strategy to solve the Revitalization conundrum – “virtualization.”

The Council was swayed by a powerful demonstration of the technology given by Mr. Moore, who led them on a tour through a prototype of “Virtual Del Mar.” First he equipped each councilmember with a Wii computer game controller for navigation and had them each choose a virtual self, or “Avatar” to be their alter egos in the computer generated townscape projected in front of them. Apparently this was their first encounter with “Second Life,” the popular Internet-based virtual social environment.

After the 15-minute tour, the Council discussion was decidedly favorable toward the project. “It makes a lotta sense,” said Dave Druker “and it’s a lot cheaper than any other alternative.” Druker was struck by the fact that parking would no longer be a problem. “People don’t need cars to get around in Second Life – they moved from place to place like jumping from one web-site to another. Once in Virtual Del Mar, your avatar moves effortlessly around town. Incredible.”

“Les Moore had me at ‘no view blockage’,” remarked Crystal Crawford, who expressed amazement that a one-story house could have multilevel basements, all with ocean views. “I was taken with that cute craftsman cottage, that housed a 60-story office building. Floor Area Ratio has no meaning in Second Life,” she enthused.

“I couldn’t believe it,” said Henry Abarbanel. “Gliding along Camino del Mar, from cheese shop to bakery to hardware store to drug store! Truly resident-serving businesses. We’ll never have to leave Del Mar to get what we need – reducing our carbon footprint dramatically.”

“Yes, and visitors can get what they want, too,” exclaimed Richard Earnest. “The idea of having parallel Camino del Mars, one for tourists and one for residents is brilliant. Tee shirt stands, candle shops, ice cream parlors, outlet stores! I understand that even day spas are possible in Second Life. Of course, pushing the Del Mar Brand on the Internet will be critical to get revenue-generating visitors,” he opined.

“Best of all,” added Carl Hilliard, “once you’re in Virtual Del Mar, there’s free wi-fi – and the signal is great everywhere, without those ugly antennas!”

Questions were raised from the audience about the fate of real Del Mar. Les Moore did admit that once you turned off your computer, you would have to walk outside into the old un-revitalized Del Mar. That seemed to ease the minds of most of the citizens watching.

The Council approved the “Del Mar Virtual Revitalization Act” by unanimous vote, and budgeted $10,000 toward the goal of getting it up and running by next April 1st.

Village Revitalization

Increased reliance on internet marketing by retailers was also touted.

Ms. Smith recommended reducing regulatory burdens for new development by replacing existing zoning with a “Smart Code”; a form of regulation encouraging multiple goals and objectives, not simply limiting permitted uses. Redevelopment that would significantly increase retail revenue will “require increased density,” a “controversial topic,” she said, but one that merits consideration.

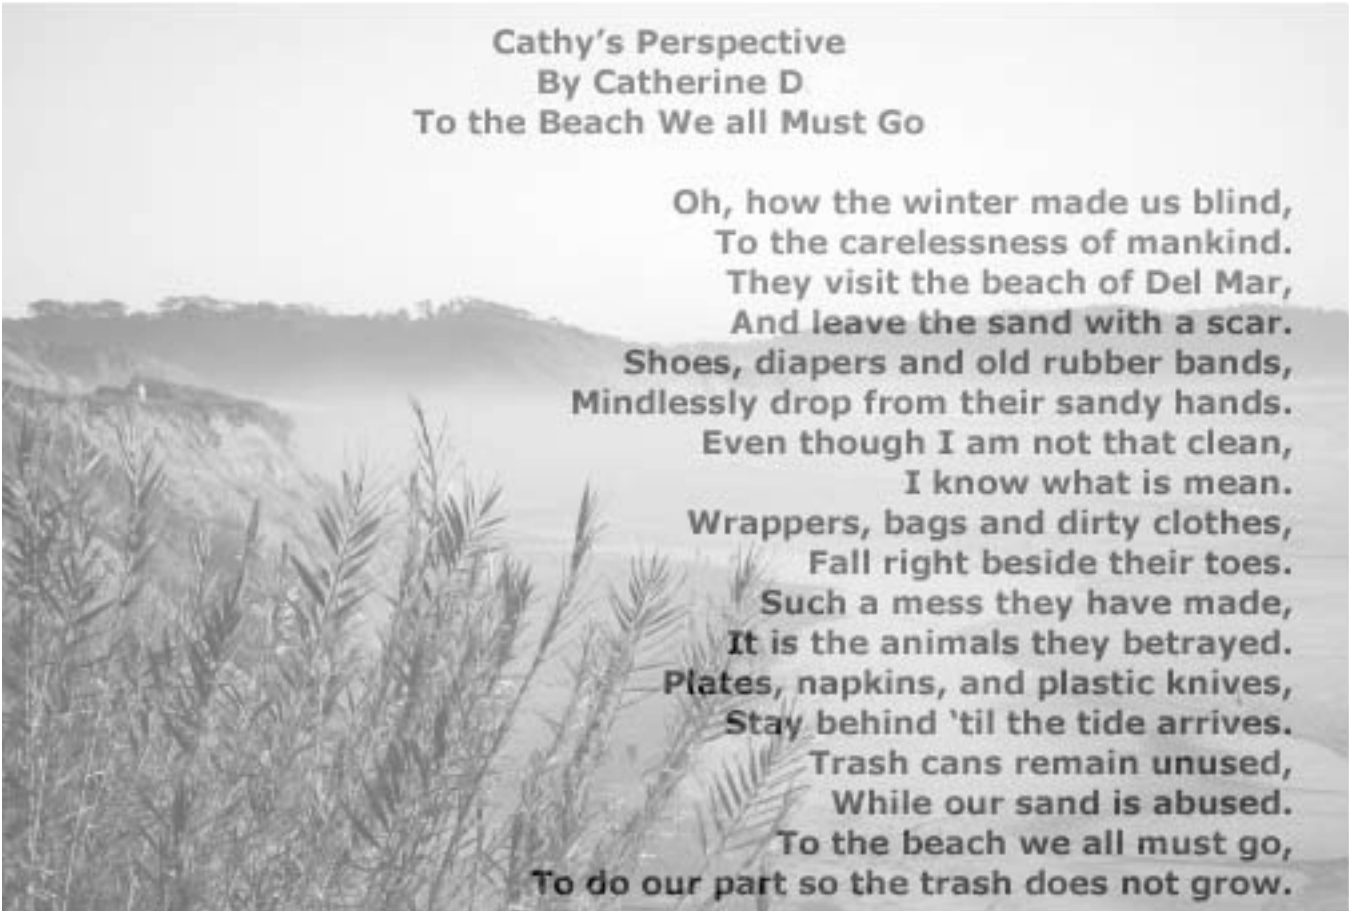

Ms. Smith recommended the City should assume responsibility for implementing the Streetscape Plan and adopt policies, such as the proposed horizontal-zoning ordinance, to encourage a continuous retail-oriented pedestrian zone along Camino del Mar.

Addressing parking adequacy, Ms. Smith concluded the greater problem is poor utilization of existing parking, not shortage of spaces. Tailoring parking regulations for each block, encouraging shared use of parking by day and evening businesses, and new technology to enhance parking meter uses were among her suggestions.

The day after her City Council presentation Ms. Smith met with the DMVA to offer suggestions for the next steps. “We are now studying implementation steps” said Jen Grove, executive director of the DMVA. She added that Streetscape has been identified as an important objective and DMVA is looking at ways to move this forward. “DMVA will also be considering ways to encourage better tenants for our village,” she stated. Recognizing that land-use issues may cause controversy, Grove expressed the hope that residents will remain “open-minded” in considering changes for improving the village core.

To the Beach We all Must Go

Oh, how the winter made us blind,
To the carelessness of mankind.
They visit the beach of Del Mar,
And leave the sand with a scar.
Shoes, diapers and old rubber bands,
Mindlessly drop from their sandy hands.
Even though I am not that clean,
I know what is mean.
Wrappers, bags and dirty clothes,
Fall right beside their toes.
Such a mess they have made,
It is the animals they betrayed.
Plates, napkins, and plastic knives,
Stay behind 'til the tide arrives.
Trash cans remain unused,
While our sand is abused.
To the beach we all must go,
To do our part so the trash does not grow.

Will the "Gold Coast" Lose its Sheen?

By John Graybill

San Diego's housing market is in the correction phase of the real-estate cycle. At the end of 2007, the median sales price in San Diego of $430,000 dropped 17% from its November 2005 peak of $517,500. Sales volume was down 26%. Nationally, foreclosures are at a record high, and home equity is at a record low. There are lots of gloomy statistics.

However, that is not the case for Del Mar's housing market. At the end of 2007, the median sales price in the Del Mar area (92014) of $1,442,000 dropped only 1.6% from the previous year. Solana Beach showed no change in median sales price. La Jolla dropped only 0.1%. Most sections of Carlsbad were up as were Encinitas and Cardiff.

Why don't the North Coastal areas follow suit with San Diego County? Pricing is one reason. Homes prices under $500,000 fell the most. It's rare to find a habitable home in Del Mar for under $500,000. According to First American Title Company's 2008 Real Estate Forecast, this area is different for the following reasons:

Biotech companies in the nearby Torrey Pines area are growing and still lure top researchers;

Nearby areas have low unemployment;

Only a few homes were lost to foreclosure in 2007 (11 in the Del Mar area);

The Carmel Valley area is becoming a new legal power hub; Vacation-home buyers don't mind short-term market fluctuations.

Realtors refer to the North Coastal area as San Diego's "Gold Coast." Del Mar has been insulated from much of the housing correction: Many property owners in Del Mar don't need to sell at any particular point in time; They generally have more financial reserves (staying power) than sellers in other areas -- for example, if a seller can't get his or her price, the property can be taken off the market until there are more buyers to bid up the price. Therefore, fewer sales occur during a down market when lower prices would otherwise be recorded.

So the $1,442,000 question is whether this trend will continue. Experts differ. The median price of a home in San Diego rose 210% from 2000 to 2005. A 15-35% drop in price isn't too bad when you've enjoyed a ride of 210% in such a short period. Some economists believe this is a normal breather for an overly robust market. One of San Diego's respected real-estate consultants, Sanford Goodkin, stated that San Diego is capable of shedding another 15%. All bets are off the table if there are multiple bank failures and the economy falls into a long, deep recession. In that case, even the Gold Coast will feel the correction. Most experts believe the housing market will hit bottom in one to three years.

Jerry Finnell Remembered

By Penny Abell

Three hundred people celebrated the life of Jerry Finnell at the Del Mar Powerhouse on a beautiful afternoon, Wednesday, March 19.

The public program, planned by his wife Kathy, featured pitch-perfect remembrances of Jerry. The themes of Jerry's kindness, strength, vision, pragmatism, humor and integrity recurred throughout the program. Ron Safran, former KPMG colleague, traveled from Connecticut to speak of Jerry as teacher and friend. City Councilman Richard Earnest and DMCC President Shirley King spoke about Jerry's contributions to the community and his friendship. Pastor Martha Greene praised the qualities of Jerry's selflessness and leadership. Highlighting the program was Donald Finnell's tribute to his father, reminiscent of Jerry's humor and kind direct style.

The Powerhouse and patio were decorated with picture

posters of Jerry and cheerful spring flowers and tablecloths. The community outdid itself with a potluck feast and plentiful wine. Jerry, sporting one of his checked or Hawaiian shirts, was ubiquitous at the party.

Conversations with Ourselves

By Henry Abarbanel

On Sunday March 9 George and Barbara Pache generously opened their home on Balboa to two dozen neighbors for the first of a series of "Community Conversations" with members of our City Council, our City Manager, and senior City staff. Through these gatherings the Council is seeking neighborhood input about the various challenges facing Del Mar and all California cities such as the effects of the State budget deficits. The Council decided to use a very successful method that we used in the past and is being implemented in Vista of going out to people's homes and asking them what is on their minds.

The number one concern of the March 9th group was how to collect some form of user fee from out-of-town visitors to our beach for the rather high costs we incur for maintaining them. There are about 2,000,000 visitors to the beach annually. Because of the Coastal Act passed in 1972, there is precious little we can do to collect any money from these visitors, but two ideas emerged: institute a permit parking plan and/or additional pay-and-display machines beyond those North of the San Dieguito bridge and bring retail shops for food and drink to the beachfront to sell items to these visitors and collect sales tax. The former can be done by the City, with the permission of the Coastal Commission, while the latter can be stimulated by the City but undertaken by private enterprise.

Our Community Services staff (the lifeguards) have done many studies, and the Coastal Commission has made it clear that residents as well as visitors must pay, not just visitors. Our citizen Finance Committee will be considering this in the near future, and will make a proposal to the Council soon. It seemed unfair to the participating neighbors at the Paches that we would have to pay, but other coastal cities, such as Laguna Beach, have faced this fact and successfully implemented a permit program that works for all.

The other big issue on people's minds was the cost for implementing the State imposed rules about clean water. Even though people agreed with the goals of the Federal Clean Water Act, next year's fees of $500,000 stimulated serious conversation about this unfunded mandate, and whether we should pay for it. We see no way to escape paying for it---via our taxes or via fees on our water and sewer bills. The first charges you by the size of your property while the latter charges you by the amount of water you use.

Not surprisingly, people at this gathering prefer their information delivered from the City by e-mail. Since any information given to a municipal government is public, Del Mar has contracted with a third party to hold safe and private all e-mail and other personal information so that residents can benefit from this method of delivering information and not lose their privacy. If you'd like to participate in this, send the information to the City Manager and she will pass it along to our safe provider.

What's on your mind about Del Mar? How would you suggest to your Council and City staff to approach the issues coming this year and next year and the years after that? There will be a conversation about all this in your neighborhood soon. Please look for announcements through door hangers in your neighborhood, e-mail notices when possible, and word of mouth among your neighbors. And thanks to the Paches for our inaugural meeting.

Tackling the "Fire Triangle"

By Dismas Abelman

The City of Del Mar, in cooperation with the San Diego Museum of Natural History conducted the seminar "Living with Wildfire". This seminar held on March 12 at the City Hall Annex was in response to a heightened awareness by community members since the most recent wildfires in October of 2007. Members of the Natural History Museum and the Del Mar Fire Department presented together a broad range of expertise on the subject of fire and the Southern California environment. Here are the highlights about the dangers of wildfires.

Fire is the rapid oxidation of a fuel resulting in heat and light production. In order to have a fire, three materials are needed: a source of ignition, fuel and oxygen. This combination of materials is called the fire triangle. The fire triangle is critically important to southern California residents because oftentimes our homes or the vegetation near us is the fuel in the triangle. The goal is to minimize the fuel in the event of a wildfire, or place it in a configuration that is less likely to burn. Knowing this, it is then essential to understand the development of the basics of fire behavior. Given a set of circumstances, fire will burn in a predictable manner. The object of fire prevention is to develop a set a circumstances that are less likely to lead to fire, and if a fire occurs, to minimize the potential for damage. This could result in fewer lives lost and less property destroyed in a large wildfire.

Many people are aware that most large fires occur when the Santa Ana winds impact Southern California. Weather is only one factor that dictates the intensity with which a fire will burn. Weather, fuel and topography are the main factors that will cause a fire to burn with tremendous heat at a rapid rate of speed or slowly with little heat or intensity. The Santa Ana winds have a drying effect on the fuels, assisting vegetation in getting started easily and allowing fire to spread rapidly. The winds have the added detrimental effects of fanning flames and making a fire line more difficult to contain and carrying embers to other places where fuel exists.

Another weather impact can be prolonged drought, which causes the drying of fuels in the area. That is, the fuels actually have less moisture contained in the branches and leaves, which allow for easier fire starts and rapid fire spread. It can also stress and kill the plants of an area increasing the amount of fuel to burn. Once the fuel has died, no amount of rain will bring it back to life, so a good rainy season or a couple of good rainy seasons will only increase the moisture levels on live plants and not provide any help to the dead fuels. Once the weather starts to dry out, the fire danger will return.

The topography will affect the way a fire burns once it gets started. It is important to remember that a house or a road built at the top or halfway up a hill will have to withstand a fire burning with greater intensity than a fire under the same conditions on flat ground. If a house is at the top of a hill on top of a draw (usually the best location for a view) the house will be exposed to a furnace if the fire gets into the draw. A draw is a canyon that runs from the bottom of the hill to the top, which allows both sides of the canyon to heat and move up the draw, FAST.

Fuel is the final portion of the equation. Depending on where you live in San Diego County, you can have almost any type of fuel. On the coast we see a lot of scrub and chaparral. Although this type of fuel doesn't look like it poses much danger, it is important to remember that this fuel, under the right conditions, will start easily and spread quickly. Since fuel is the only factor we have the ability modify, it is important to take the steps available to reduce the likelihood of loss of life and property when a fire does occur.

The City of Del Mar is exploring the possibility of presenting the "Living with Wildfire" class again in the future. The scheduling will depend on the level of interest and schedule for interested participants. If you are interested in attending, please contact the fire department at 755-1522.

Ann – Our “Mother of Exiles”

By Sherryl Parks

Long-time resident Ann Dempsey has been teaching English as a Second Language for over 16 years. Ann became interested in teaching when her daughter, Joanna taught English in Cambodia. Ann trained at UCSD Extension which prepared her to meet the wide variety of immigrants coming into San Diego County. Her students are between 18 and 80 years of age, representing Korea, Japan, Thailand, Russia, Iran, France, Colombia, Ecuador, Taiwan, Mexico and China. Many of her Chinese students have arrived here to take care of their grandchildren while the parents work. A great number of her students are retired doctors, university professors or successful business people.

Ann’s enthusiasm for her teaching is obvious. She engages students in practical areas of life including ordering out at a restaurant, using 911 to make emergency calls, and negotiating change at the grocery store. The level of understanding English ranges from beginning to advanced. She has learned much from her students over the years. For example, she has learned to always accept a person from Asia with two hands – not one. And one always offers something with two hands. She also reports that the word that everyone knows best is “pizza” and of course that isn’t really English. She has learned about the most pressing concerns of immigrants in the county – public transportation. There is a bus only once an hour in Solana Beach and nothing at all in Carmel Valley. If you don’t have a car, which most of them don’t, you resort to traveling by foot. One of her students – in her seventies – walks to class one hour each way!

Ann teaches classes at the Solana Beach library two days a week and Carmel Valley library one day a week. Her most popular class is for those becoming US citizens, at Solana Beach on Wednesday evenings. There is no cost to attend the classes, but students should buy a workbook that costs $23.

Catalogs of classes are offered through the San Dieguito Adult School and are available at the local libraries, but Ann will be happy to answer any specific questions (755-7563). If you leave your name and number, please speak slowly.

Bled By the State

By Kenya Warren

Once again, the State of California is proposing to balance their budget by imposing cuts on city revenues. The City of Del Mar will lose $179,268 in public-safety funding if the State’s proposed alternative budget is adopted.

Governor Schwarzenegger declared a fiscal emergency in January 2008 with a $14.5 billion deficit. This required the Legislature to address the fiscal crisis resulting in mid-year budget cut bills that reduced the shortfall by approximately $7.5 billion. Despite those budget cuts, the Legislative Analyst’s Office (LAO) announced that the state budget deficit is closer to $16 billion instead of $14.5 billion as originally projected by the Governor. The LAO took an unusual further step by offering an alternative proposed state budget, which included several elements that would directly impact public safety in California cities.

The City of Del Mar will lose $69,663 from its sales-tax revenues because of the reallocation of all Proposition 172 funding to new special county Public Safety Realignment Accounts. Prop 172 monies come from the 1/2 cent state sales tax that was approved in 1993 by California voters and was intended to mitigate the impact of property-tax shifts on local public-safety operations.

Del Mar will lose another $100,000 by the elimination of the Citizens Option for Public Safety (COPS) program. The COPS program provides, among other things, an annual subvention of state funds for supplemental local law enforcement (SLESF) allocated to cities, counties and five police special districts on a per capita basis with $100,000 minimum grant per agency. These monies are used, together with funding from the City of Del Mar’s General Fund, to achieve additional enforcement related to beach activities. This funding provides a Park Ranger who also issues parking citations and enforces all municipal-code violations at the beach.

By the elimination of the Local Detention Facility Subventions, the City of Del Mar loses $9,605. The deletion of this funding would result in the return of county booking fees charged to cities and others. So, not only will the city be receiving fewer resources, the LAO proposal will assure that the remaining resources are drawn down by the city being required to pay booking fees to counties.

In total, the LAO proposed alternative budget will reduce revenues for public safety in the City of Del Mar by a total of $179,268.

Confidence Breeds Success

Interview with Janet Bernard, DMUSD Interim Superintendent

By Susan Miller

As has been widely reported in local news, Del Mar Union School District (DMUSD) Superintendent Tom Bishop recently resigned, leaving his position on February 29. Soon after Mr. Bishop's resignation, the DMUSD Board of Trustees appointed Janet Bernard as Interim Superintendent. The Board expects to identify a permanent superintendent within several months, allowing a transition over the summer.

Upon naming Mrs. Bernard in this role, DMUSD Board President Annette Easton stated, "Mrs. Bernard's breadth of experience across a variety of administrative positions will allow her to move seamlessly into this role... Mrs. Bernard's leadership style centers on trust, team building, and empowering others."

To give Sandpiper readers an opportunity to get to know Janet Bernard, we conducted the following email interview with Mrs. Bernard:

Please tell Sandpiper readers about yourself and your background in education.

I am a native to San Diego and completed my B.A. and Masters Degrees in Education Leadership, and Administrative Service Credential at San Diego State University. My undergraduate major was Social Sciences with a minor in Music. I play the cello.

I started my teaching career with the Carlsbad Unified School District as a music teacher and taught in the District for ten years from K through middle school. I served as a principal in the South Bay Union School District in Imperial Beach and the San Marcos Unified School District in San Marcos. I also held central office positions in operations, learning-support services and program/staff development.

I've served the Del Mar Union School District for the past nine years in the position of Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction. Some of my major responsibilities have included the coordination of: strategic planning, curriculum adoptions, services for English language learners, GATE, beginning teacher induction program, new teacher orientation, articulation efforts with the San Dieguito High School District, local and state assessment programs, and special curriculum projects.

As personal background, I've been married to my husband Walter, a retired engineer for KFMB TV, for 33 years. We have six children, all grown except for the youngest who is a senior at Rancho Bernardo High School.

What are your goals for the remainder of this school year, during the term of your role as Interim Superintendent?

- Help build bridges between a divided staff and a divided community;
- Re-focus on our mission of meeting the individual learning needs of every student;
- Maintain our diligent work on the implementation of the professional learning communities model;
- Hire a new Director of Technology and Coordinator of State and Federal Projects to strengthen support and services for our staff, students, and parents;
- Begin the work of our strategic planning action teams in health, wellness, and physical education, and securing funding for the enrichment program;
- Recommend a new K-6 science program for Board adoption;
- Evaluate all aspects of the district operation to assist the permanent superintendent with setting priorities for the '08-'09 school year.

What do you find to be the most challenging part of your job?

The most challenging part of my job is not having enough time to complete all the tasks I have prioritized to be accomplished in a day. There just aren't enough hours.

What are your hopes for the future of DMUSD?

My hope for the future of the Del Mar Union School District is that we will maintain our continuous journey for program improvement and will do our best to reach the NCLB goal of every DMUSD student being proficient in the 2013-14 school year.

What do you find to be the most gratifying part of your job?

The most gratifying part of my job is observing students being confident and successful with learning – be it in the classroom, a musical performance, or a special project. I firmly believe that confidence breeds success and is the conduit for student well-being.

I am also gratified to observe teachers growing as leaders with their knowledge, expertise, and skills. I have mentored many teachers over the years who have gone on to become grade-level leaders, principals and district leaders. I am so proud of those individuals! As a teacher at heart, it just doesn't get any better than that.

A New Perspective on the Lagoon

By Liz Dernetz

If asked to describe the San Dieguito Lagoon, some people would say it's at the mouth of the San Dieguito River, whose headwaters flow from the Pacific Crest at over 5,000 feet above sea level all the way to the Pacific Ocean. Some see it as the river bordering Dog Beach, while others see it as a major project to restore a tidal basin and wetland habitat. Another perspective of the lagoon will be presented at this year's Lagoon Day 2008 celebration. The event features Dr. Exequiel Ezcurra, provost of the San Diego Natural History Museum and director of the museum's scientific research division, who will speak on the topic, From the Tide Pools to the Stars: How the San Dieguito Lagoon Fits into the Larger Ecosystem.

Dr. Ezcurra, whose division is known as the Biodiversity Research Center of the Californias, is currently spearheading an initiative uniquely focused on understanding and managing the Sea of Cortés as one whole ecosystem, including the people who live there. Inspired in part by John Steinbeck's famous "Log from the Sea of Cortez" – in which Steinbeck wondered at the delicate balance between the sea and the many creatures living there – Dr. Ezcurra will address how the restoration of our lagoon will re-establish its role in the larger coastal and ocean ecosystem. This role becomes even more important at a time when so many natural beauties of the California coast are being degraded or lost.

The San Dieguito Lagoon Day event will be held on Sunday, April 27 in the Powerhouse Community Center beginning at 6:30pm, with exhibits, Q & A with environmentalists and other experts, and a display of art created by local third grade students after being inspired by lagoon field trips. The lecture will begin at 7pm. The public is welcome and there is no charge for the event. Light refreshments will be available.

Sips & Tidbits

By Liz and Wayne Dernetz

Longtime residents fondly remember the Poseidon Restaurant, Tommy Ranglas' fulfillment of the American Dream. It was a quirky bit of surfside grinds and drinks, next to the 17th Street Lifeguard Tower. After surviving the Nazi occupation during World War II and several post-war revolutions, Tommy, now 82, left Greece for San Diego. With a loan from his mother in 1968, he bought the Poseidon for $48,500.

Through force of his Mediterranean personality and his shrewd business sense, Tommy converted the somewhat run-down restaurant into a financial success and a favorite among locals, mainly for its burgers and fries. Tommy extended a wooden deck out onto the beach – without benefit of permits of course – where he hosted the “Fairest of the Fair” competitions for several years, with the ever-present Tom Hernandez as Don Diego.

The Poseidon on the Beach today is not like its predecessor; its better! In 2003, Tommy turned over the operation of the old Poseidon to his son Tommy, Jr. and daughter Nikki. According to Nikki, 36, she and her brother “realized the potential” in the old Poseidon and that “it needed a facelift. My brother is more progressive than I am,” she added, “I’m more traditional.” That was a happy combination, for when the new Poseidon opened on April 1, 2004, the traditional ambience of beach-front casual blended perfectly with a progressively elegant style (by David Robinson Design). “It’s beautiful,” said Tommy, Sr., on first seeing the finished result.

The Poseidon retains an open feel on warm days with roll-up windows and doors facing the ocean and an expansive new beach-front terrace (now permitted, of course). “We still welcome guests from off the beach,” says Nikki proudly, but in the evening it transforms into a “see-and-be-seen kind of place; we have quite a few celebrities visiting us.”

Nikki Ranglas, (l) and Poseidon hostess Courtney (r) ready to welcome diners

The Poseidon's day menu remains under the careful supervision of longtime-chef Carlos and along with old favorites includes new lighter offerings. We recommend the omelet of spinach, mushroom and cheese and the “Poseidon Benedict,” featuring Norwegian smoked salmon in place of ham, for Sunday brunch on the terrace.

The evening menu falls under the supervision of Executive Chef Timothy Gutmann, a southern Californian who trained under Master Chefs Franz Popperl and Thierry Blouet. Dinner selections are priced from $20 to $35 and include Sesame-Crusted Salmon with ginger soy sauce, Beef Filet with red pepper potatoes and Cajun-fried onions, or Day-boat Scallops with ginger pesto and purple potatoes.

The Poseidon serves breakfasts on weekends from 9:00am and is open weekdays from 11:00am to 3:45pm. Dinners are served from 5:00 to 9:30pm. Happy Hour runs from 4:00 to 6:30pm (half-off bar appetizers). For reservations, call 755-9345, or visit the website at www.theposeidonrestaurant.com.

Neighborhood Character Threatened

By Brooke Eisenberg-Pike

On Monday, April 7 the City Council will hear the appeal of an approval to build a two-story house at 642 Hoska Drive. The house, including a detached guest house is 2933 square feet. The basement is an additional 2700 square feet. The total floor area is 5633 square feet. The lot of almost 12,000 square feet is large enough to accommodate the same size house in a single story. The applicant and the neighbors have been before the Design Review Board three times. At the second hearing there was a 3-3 vote. The attorney retained by the applicants asked the Council to allow them to go back to DRB a third time when a full board was present. The project was approved in a 4-3 vote. The neighbors, Rod Franklin, Shirley Dentz and Brooke Eisenberg-Pike appealed, and the Council agreed to hear the appeal.

The issue is simple but of great consequence to our community in that it is an issue of upholding the Community Plan rather than incrementally changing it through actions of the DRB. The Council can remedy that at the April 7th hearing. The Community Plan expressly requires that we “encourage single story development in areas where two-story development would be disruptive to neighborhood character and scale of development.” This would be a two-story house smack dab in the center of a street of one-story houses that are nestled into the hillside. If approved it would be the first step in incrementally changing the character and scale of our neighborhood and a big step toward ignoring the stated intent of the Community Plan. Next time will one of the directives of the Community Plan be ignored in your neighborhood? Your participation can insure that our Community Plan is upheld.
